BELGIAN SOLDIERS ASK GIRLS HERE TO WRITE
Lonely Men Four Years at Front Would Like Letters.
Lonely Belgian soldiers are asking for letters from American girls, the Belgian information service announced last night.

Many of these soldiers have been in the trenches for four years and they long to hear from a land untrampled by the Germans. While many of them have received letters from American girls, there are still a great many who have never been supplied with an American correspondent. A list of the lonely soldiers will be supplied through the Belgian offices at 1608 H street northwest.

The restrictions regarding the sending of Christmas packages to American soldiers at the front does not apply to Belgian soldiers. The packages, however, should be kept as addressed in care of the information service. Acceptable gifts are tobacco, cigarettes, pencils, writing paper, soap, tooth paste, chocolate, handkerchiefs, woolen socks and woolen gloves.

BELGIAN MANUFACTURERS
MAP ECONOMIC RESTORATION

National Bureau for Revival of Economic Activity in Belgium Formed—State to Supervise Activities.

The economic restoration of Belgium will be undertaken under the direction of a group of Belgian manufacturers and merchants, with branches in Paris, London and The Hague. The organization will be incorporated as a Belgian co-operative aid society. It will be called the National Bureau for the Revival of Economic Activity in Belgium. This organization will act as a purchasing agent to replace tools and put Belgian commerce and industry on its feet.

"And, after the first great burst of joy, Belgium will settle down and go back to work," declares Professor Paul Van den Vender, director of the Belgian official information service and former professor at the University of Louvain, who has just returned to this country from Havre.

America Will Give Food Aid.
"Thanks to the American people, the food problem will be solved. The commission for the relief of Belgium will undoubtedly double its efforts, now that the coast is freed and there are so many more to feed."

"But the great problem is that of employment for the more than a million idle laborers who will be left in Belgium."

"Belgium's national life depends more heavily on its industries than that of any other nation except England. The Germans, in their four years of occupation, have requisitioned practically all of the raw materials and machinery in the country."

"They have left Belgium an empty shell."

"There is work enough to do to rebuild the cities and towns and make the country habitable for the thousands of refugees who will pour back as soon as the Germans are driven across their own border. But it cannot be done without machinery and raw materials. For these, and for the credit with which they must be obtained, Belgium will have to rely on her allies."

To Be Co-operative.
For the making of the purchases and the handling of the credit to be established, the Belgian Co-operative Society is formed.

The officers of the bureau are among the most distinguished business men of Belgium stationed during the war in France, in England and in the Netherlands.

The society is open to all Belgian merchants and manufacturers. It will not be possible for any one to own more than ten shares nor to vote by proxy at the meetings on more than forty shares. The annual dividend can not be higher than 5 per cent. The undisturbed excess profits, by means of liquidation, will be divided among the members of the society pro rata according to the business transacted by them.

The national bureau will not try to take the place of the usual means of business. Its only desire will be to make up for the temporary disorganization of these means.

The purchasing programs will be prepared by commissions with technical knowledge, who already have collected an invaluable amount of data.

Over all will be the final direction and control of the State. The minister of economic affairs will have a deciding vote. He will examine the programs worked out by the bureau. He may amend them and supplement them.

The State will take into consideration the indemnities on which the manufacturers who are victims of German devastations will have a claim.

"Second, the credit and the machinery and materials that Belgium must obtain from her allies will by no means represent a loss. For they must be paid for by Germany," declares Van den Vender. Belgium seeks no punitive indemnities for money cannot repay her people for their sufferings. But she asks that every dollar's worth of property that has been stolen by the Germans be replaced, and that includes the stupendous sums taken by way of "fines" as well as reparation for destroyed cities and ruined factories.

Forced to Cut Their Own.
"Humpty" Dawson and Pearl Staples, the two barbers of the town, are both sick with the "flu," and there are more men around with gashed faces than you used to see in a country church at Sunday morning services.—Toronto, Mo., Republican.
